- When attaching Intel products to a third-party device, the bit error rate is optimized if the third-party device utilizes attenuation-based tuning.
- The maximum time that a 12200 switch will take to reboot is 120 seconds. Reboot times in your environment may be much less.
- For switches shipped with firmware version 6.1.0.0.72 (or earlier), when connecting two 12200 externally-managed switches together, please see the “Creating an 8x Port: Externally-managed 12200” section of the Intel® True Scale 12000 Hardware Installation Guide for cabling recommendations.

Note: For 12200 switches shipping with firmware version 6.1.0.2.1 (or newer), the default configuration (1x/4x) is recommended unless there is a specific need to use 8x links.
